BREAKING NEWS

MIX MASTER
What's on Obama's iPod?

Barack Obama has "pretty eclectic tastes" in music, he said in an interview to be published in Friday's issue of Rolling Stone. His iPod playlist includes rock, jazz, classical and rap. Asked what he thought of rap, Obama said the genre has broken down barriers within the music world, though he's concerned about his daughters—Malia, 9, and Sasha, 7—listening to it. "I am troubled sometimes by the misogyny and materialism of a lot of rap lyrics," he said, "but I think the genius of the art form has shifted the culture and helped to desegregate music." [AP]

Obama asks fundraisers to help Clinton pay back debt

Associated Press

WASHINGTON Barack Obama is sharing one his most valuable assets—his top fundraisers—with former rival Hillary Clinton to help her pay off her debt, the latest effort to heal the wounds of a bruising primary campaign.

PERSONAL INVESTMENT

Hillary Clinton (above) reported a $22.5 million debt at the end of May, more than half of which was a personal loan to her presidential campaign. Clinton, in a call to her top fundraisers last week, said she would concentrate on paying off money owed to vendors, not her personal loans.

She made the same pitch in a fundraising e-mail to supporters Wednesday.

"As you know, I had to loan money to my campaign at critical moments," Clinton wrote. "I'm not asking anyone's help paying that back. That was my investment and my commitment because I believe so deeply in our cause." [AP]

Obama on Tuesday asked his finance team to help Clinton pay back at least $10 million from her failed presidential campaign, setting the stage for joint appearances by the two former rivals later in the week.

In a teleconference with his top fundraisers, Obama asked them to do what they could to help Clinton, according to two Democrats familiar with the call. A campaign spokesman confirmed that Obama had asked them to help the former first lady.

"Some of our donors have asked and Barack said if they have the ability to raise or give money to help on debt, we encourage them to do so," spokesman Robert Gibbs said.

Obama's green light to his money bundlers came two days before he and Clinton were scheduled to meet in Washington with some of her top fundraisers in a show of unity after their bruising contest for the Democratic presidential nomination. On Friday, the two planned to campaign together in New Hampshire.

Going green with paranoia

Writing once about the collective decision of today's younger women to go out in public wearing next to nothing, the great espn.com columnist Bill Simmons memorably referred to "every married guy over 30 kicking themselves that they sowed their oats in the Let's Wear Baggy Sweaters, Eat & Be Scared of AIDS Era."

That's kind of the way I feel about the green movement. Those of us who grew up in the baggy-sweater 1980s have moved on to spearhead the "off-gassing" 2000s.

Off-gassing (The process by which deadly chemicals seep out of everything in your home and directly into your brain!) is only the latest concern brought to my attention by those noble souls hoping to save the planet while trying to sell me something.

Not too long ago, it seemed like you were doing all right if you recycled and thought about organic milk once in a while.

Now, it turns out, everything our parents made us eat, wear, play with, live in and freebase was slowly killing us. And it's up to us to save our own children from all that while slowly killing them with our paranoia. (I won't blame my son if, when I die, he purchases a tombstone for me that under my name reads, "Did You Wash Your Hands?")

None of this is a knock on the people leading the green movement. Because the inescapable fact is that those people are right, while my mom, with her secret vats of high-fructose corn syrup, was dead wrong and evil.

But I'll be damned if my mom wasn't a lot more fun. My mom gave me and my sister Oreos after school. We'd wash them down with polyvinyl chloride juice. The green movement's idea of parenting fun is $25 onesies proclaiming "Organic Baby" that have achieved what was once thought impossible: making a 1-year-old look like an ass.

The rest of the green prescription for life is to worry, feel guilty and spend the kind of money you're embarrassed to tell your grandparents about. Last year, my wife and I splurged on a Prius, though it should be said that the main reasons we got it were because my wife liked the way it looked and I wanted credibility when discussing the environment. Now, feeling left out of the national "Can you believe how much gas costs?" conversation, we may have the hybrid system removed.

Our newest pricey, almost embarrassing-to-admit green obsession: getting an organic new bed.

Back when people used to want a bed, they'd go to the closest mattress store. They'd first try opening the door. Then they'd bang on the door for a few minutes. Then they'd realize the store was closed. Then they'd walk away, perplexed as to why all mattress stores keep all their lights on after they close. Then they'd return the next day when the store was open and buy a mattress.

That's probably what we would have done, too, but someone had to go whisper something in my wife's ear about the hidden dangers of new conventional mattresses. Turns out, she was told, they ... off-gas ... formaldehyde. Picture the frog you dissected in high school biology class. That's basically you after sleeping on a new conventional mattress. As my mom would say to me, it's a wonder we all survived.

Anyhow, to keep costs down, we may get a twin-sized organic mattress. My wife can sleep on the floor. It shouldn't be that hard on her back if she lies on a pile of her old baggy sweaters. [ MARK BAZER IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR. ]

Shedding possessions sharpened focus

I decided to re-evaluate what items I needed in life after I ended a serious relationship and moved into a new studio ("The 100-thing challenge," June 25 cover story). Stripping away most of my possessions and starting over was like a spiritual rebirth. Not only did I get rid of the useless clutter, but I also did away with a lot of the things we take for granted—TV, home Internet, video games, clocks, microwave, etc. It's helped me to become a more focused, cleanly, and organized person.

City goes for green in 2016

Chicago Tribune

Aiming to boost its environmental credentials, Chicago's 2016 Olympic bid team will solicit corporate support for yet another aspect of its bid, this time to help create urban "green" centers around the planned sporting venues.

The program will demonstrate a "commitment to climate action," bid leader Patrick Ryan said Wednesday morning. "We know, for example, that Tokyo is going to be emphasizing the environment very significantly, but we don't think they will have any more commitment to it than we do."

An IOC working group that conducted technical evaluations of the four finalists' bids—Chicago, Tokyo, Rio de Janeiro and Madrid—earlier this month ranked Tokyo first on environmental issues, followed by Madrid, Chicago and Rio, in that order. The finalists will submit much more detailed bid plans with the IOC in February 2009.

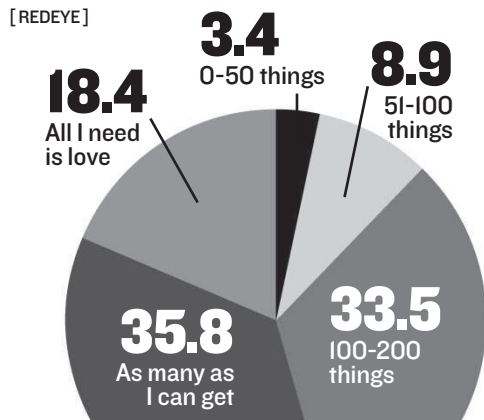

The Chicago 2016 team will work with the Climate Group, a London-based non-profit, to link corporations with non-profits to help create "green" zones in the vicinity of sports venues. Within these zones, owners of commercial and residential property will be encouraged "to improve the environmental profiles of their properties" by tapping into a variety of city programs aimed at helping people reduce energy and water consumption, said Bob Accarino, vice president/environment for Chicago 2016.

A number of non-profit groups have signed on to help with the urban green center initiative, including ICLEI-Local Governments for Sustainability; the Environmental Law & Policy Center; the Center for Neighborhood Technology; and Friends of the Chicago River.

R. Kelly fan out of jail

Woman who spent 34 days in the clink says singer should have helped

Chicago Tribune

Debra Triplett spent 34 days in jail waiting for R. Kelly to come to her rescue.

He never came.

And now the 48-year-old grandmother from Aurora blames the R&B superstar for her five weeks spent in the clink.

Moments after being released from Cook County Jail on Wednesday, Triplett had harsh words for the singer and suggested he should have posted her $5,000 cash bail after she was locked up for shouting "Free R. Kelly!" to his jury. At the very least, she says, he should have acknowledged her loyalty.

"I was real bummed about that," she said. "For sure, he should have stepped up."

Triplett, who has several drug convictions and describes herself as a "big, big fan," initially went to the courthouse on May 22 for a criminal proceeding involving her son. But when she and her other children learned Kelly was on the fifth floor for his high-profile trial, they rushed upstairs to sneak a peek.

They were waiting outside the courtroom when deputies ordered the hallway cleared to make way for the jury, she said. As the panel prepared to exit

The remix?

R. Kelly inquired about helping Debra Triplett, his attorney said, but he was told it would look unseemly for him to bail out a woman who attempted to illegally influence his jury. After being questioned by the judge in open court, none of the jurors admitted to hearing her outburst. "Robert felt bad for her," Sam Adam Jr. said. "He wanted to help her, but I advised him not to."

a freight elevator, she said she decided to defend her musical idol and shouted "Free R. Kelly!" When a sergeant ordered her to be quiet, she admits she repeated her plea again—albeit in a softer voice.

Cook County Judge Vincent Gaughan ordered her immediately jailed as Kelly looked on with a frown.

"He should have let me know he cared," Triplett said. "Send me a message, a thank you, a goodbye. Show me that you care."

Triplett pleaded guilty to criminal contempt of court Wednesday and was released after being credited with time served. In her first courtroom appearance since her incarceration, Triplett apologized for her actions. "I am sorry for speaking out in the court," she told the judge.

Gaughan, a no-nonsense judge who appreciates acts of contrition, accepted the apology, but said her actions could have had serious consequences. The judge could have kept her in jail for up to six months without a formal indictment from the grand jury.

"Thank God it didn't affect the trial, but it could have," Gaughan said. "You could have deprived either the state or R. Kelly a fair trial."

"R. Kelly could have helped her out," Triplett's husband, Charles, said. "He has the money."

Never a fan of Kelly's, Charles Triplett said he no longer enjoys hearing the singer's music played in his home. His wife, however, says she remains a devotee, though she has downgraded her feelings for the self-proclaimed Pied Piper from "absolutely love" to "like."

Now that his client is a free man, attorney Sam Adam Jr. said he's sure Kelly would like to acknowledge her loyalty.

"If she gives me her address, I'll make sure she gets a copy of his new CD when it comes out later this summer."

FAA managers under investigation

Managers at a FAA radar facility handling flights into and out of Chicago's airports are under investigation over allegations they covered up air-traffic errors, authorities said Wednesday.

The U.S. Department of Transportation's inspector general's office confirmed the probe focuses on whether supervisors at the Federal Aviation Administration radar facility in Elgin underreported air-safety violations by controllers.

Investigators are looking into whether the controller errors were instead blamed on pilots or simply ignored, officials said.

The controller errors under investigation involved failures to precisely maintain the required spacing between airplanes taking off or landing at O'Hare, Midway and smaller area airports.

"We are still doing field work as part of an ongoing audit of the FAA's process for investigating and reporting operational errors," said Madeline Chulumovich, spokeswoman for the transportation department's inspector general.

She confirmed an investigation at the Elgin radar facility was under way and that several other FAA facilities across the country also would be checked out, but she declined to release preliminary findings. The probe began in Texas.

AMERICAN CUTTING BACK AT O'HARE

American Airlines is planning deep cuts at O'Hare beginning in November, as it pares money-losing routes and grounds gas-guzzling aircraft.

American said Wednesday it plans to eliminate 62 flights at O'Hare: 28 departures on its regular American Airlines service and 34 flights flown by American Eagle, its regional carrier.

By November, American's presence at O'Hare will shrink 13 percent, year over year, said Mary Frances Fagan, spokeswoman for the nation's largest airline.

at the Elgin facility last week told officials there that he found at least three suspicious incidents since 2006 in which FAA supervisors blamed controller errors on pilots, said David Stock, president of the National Air Traffic Controllers Association at the facility.

FAA officials declined to answer questions about the investigation.

The controllers union frequently is at odds with FAA supervisors but defended management at the facility over the latest allegations.

Dogs reunited with owner

Two Shar-Peis rescued by Illinois State Police on the Kennedy Expressway during Monday morning rush hour have been claimed by their owner, officials said Wednesday. Anne Kent, executive director of Chicago Animal Care and Control, said the male and female dogs will be microchipped, which will make it easier for the dogs' owner to be identified if they are found roaming. It's unclear how the animals ended up on the expressway at California Avenue on the Northwest Side.

Deep-dish heads to Iraq

Retired Air Force Sgt. Mark Evans wanted to send a taste of Chicago to troops in Afghanistan and Iraq. So he's doing it deep-dish pizza-style. The Elk Grove Village man has arranged for thousands of pizzas to be frozen, packed in dry ice and shipped to the Middle East in time for the Fourth of July. His 16-year-old son, Kent, came up with the idea. The hope is to send as many as 3,000 pizzas.

Tribune real estate in play

Tribune Co. Chairman Sam Zell told staff Wednesday the company is in discussions with "a number of real estate firms" to determine how to generate the most value from the neo-Gothic Michigan Avenue home of the flagship Chicago Tribune. The company also is weighing its strategic options concerning the L.A. Times' downtown Times Mirror Square complex, another high-profile real estate asset. Tribune also owns Red-Eye.

Urban League conference

The National Urban League will stage its annual conference in Chicago next year for the first time in three decades. Mayor Daley said landing the conference could help Chicago secure the 2016 Olympics. Marc Morial, president and CEO of the Urban League, said he expected the conference to attract 10,000 visitors to Chicago and to have a minimum "$10 million impact" on the local economy.

43 illegal immigrants arrested in 5-day sweep

Federal immigration authorities arrested 43 illegal immigrants in Chicago and surrounding areas during a five-day operation that ended Tuesday night, officials announced Wednesday.

Twenty-five of those arrested were fugitives who had been ordered out of the country, while 18 were questioned and arrested during the sweep, according to a release by U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Nearly half of those arrested had previous criminal convictions, authorities said.

"It's important for us to send a strong message to anyone who ignores deportation orders handed down by federal immigration judges," said Glenn Triveline, a director at Immigration and Customs Enforcement overseeing detention and removal operations.

During the same five days, another 84 illegal immigrants were arrested in and around Milwaukee and Kansas City, Mo., officials said.

Those picked up in Illinois hailed from Albania, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, India, Jordan, Mexico, Poland and Yugoslavia, officials said.

Boy improving after drive-by shooting

An 8-year-old Chicago boy who survived a drive-by shooting Monday night was improving Wednesday, sitting in a chair and playing a hand-held video game, said a spokesman at Stroger Hospital.

Josue Torres will not be released for at least a few more days, but his condition has been steadily improving, said spokesman Marcel Bright, who visited the boy's room in the pediatric intensive care unit.

"He's talking and eating. He's alert," Bright said. "He appears to be very resilient."

Meanwhile, Mayor Daley, while not commenting on the specifics the shooting that seriously wounded Josue, backed his police superintendent Wednesday and said if parents choose to take part in criminal behavior, they should not involve children in those activities.

"If you are doing something that deals with drugs and gangs and guns, don't place your child in harm's way," Daley said, amplifying the message Police Supt. Jody Weis sent a day earlier. "You take that responsibility."

"If the parents are involved in gangs, drugs and guns, they are going to be victims, or their children are going to be victims, or someone in their home is going to become a victim. That's the problem. We have to put the responsi-

On Tuesday, as Josue recovered in a hospital from two bullet wounds suffered in the drive-by shooting, Weis said the boy's parents had made him vulnerable to violence.

6 killed in shooting

An angry employee opened fire at a plastics plant in Henderson, Ky., after an argument early Wednesday, fatally shooting a supervisor and four others before committing suicide, police and a company official said.

2 Murder conviction

Neil Entwistle, a British man who fled the U.S. after his wife and baby daughter were shot to death in their home, was convicted Wednesday in Woburn, Mass., of murdering them.

3 Rate unchanged

The Federal Reserve decided on Wednesday to leave a key interest rate unchanged and cited a heightened risk of inflation, which could lead to rate increases down the road.

4 Teens and alcohol

Many of the nation's estimated 10.8 million underage drinkers are turning to their parents or other adults for free alcohol. A government survey of teens from 2002 to 2006 said slightly more than half had engaged in underage drinking.

5 3-year-old hero

A 3-year-old girl from Guthrie, Okla., used a simple song her mom made up to teach her how to call 911 to summon help when her pregnant mom fainted. Madelyn Eaves used the song "911 Green" to dial her mother's BlackBerry.

6 Naked man caught

Police in Savannah, Ga., say that when Bill Merit, 49, left the Chatham County jail, he was naked. Witnesses called police, who arrested him and jailed him again on a charge of public indecency. Police aren't sure why he left without clothes.

Prostitution bust

Hundreds of people in 16 cities have been arrested and 21 children rescued in what the FBI is calling a five-day roundup of networks of pimps who force children into prostitution.

Death penalty for child rape rejected

7 WASHINGTON A closely divided Supreme Court on Wednesday prohibited states from executing those who rape children but don't kill their victims, retaining limits on the death penalty that have been in place for more than 30 years.

In a 5-4 decision, the court concluded that Louisiana had violated the Eighth Amendment in making the rape of a child younger than 12 a capital offense. The ruling blocks other states that have been considering similar punishment.

JUSTICES SPEAK

The majority stressed that their ruling didn't necessarily undercut use of the death penalty in other nonfatal crimes, including treason or espionage.

"There is a social consensus against the death penalty for child rape," Justice Anthony Kennedy wrote for the majority, adding that "the death penalty is not a proportional punishment for the crime."

Kennedy's reasoning largely followed an influential 2005 court opinion he also authored prohibiting the execution of juveniles, as well as a 2002 opinion prohibiting the execution of the mentally retarded. The court's underlying notion is that "evolving standards of decency" can restrict practices that once were widespread.

THE DIGITS

Global warming could increase illegal immigration, destabilize governments, add to terrorism and cause humanitarian disasters that would affect U.S. national security, according to projections U.S. intelligence agencies presented to a joint House committee hearing on Wednesday.

>> 2025: Year there will be up to a 10 percent decline in rice and grain crops in southern and eastern Asia

>> 12: Number of years in which Africa could see crops reduced by as much as half, due to increased droughts

Jesuit college seeks to block bar's expansion

8 SCRANTON, Pa. Pizzeria owner Thomas Hashem knew his target audience when he opened a $1.5 million sports bar across the street from the University of Scranton.

With its seating for 100, high-end sound system, big-screen plasma TVs and Xbox game systems, Goodfellas—which opened before summer break to big crowds—is catnip to college kids.

And that worries officials at the University of Scranton, a Jesuit university with more than 4,000 undergraduates.

The school took the unusual step of suing to prevent Goodfellas from getting a liquor license, managing to win some concessions. Now, it is back in court trying to block a proposed expansion that would make the bar even more enticing for students.

Hashem, 38, said he resents college officials' "knee-jerk response."

NOT SO RARE

Many college towns have tried to limit the availability of alcohol off-campus, mainly through restrictive zoning and bans on drink specials and advertising to students. Research has shown that a high concentration of bars and liquor stores near campuses lead to increases in binge and underage drinking.

1 ATHENS A large forest fire Wednesday on the outskirts of Athens caused power outages across Athens and sent a large cloud of smoke over the city. # Sending mixed smoke signals

5 NETHERLANDS Starting July 1, the Netherlands will banish tobacco smoke from restaurants and all other public places. But in a bizarre twist, patrons of certain coffee shops where marijuana is sold over the counter still can light up their cannabis joints. Possessing the weed is actually illegal in the Netherlands, but smoking it is tolerated.

Owners say the tobacco ban—a trend that becoming increasingly widespread in Europe—could be a threat to the specially licensed coffee houses, because patrons traditionally prefer their cannabis joints mixed with tobacco. “As this is a ban on tobacco smoke, most coffee shops will allow customers to smoke pure weed, but not tobacco, and this will be potentially really difficult to regulate,” said Lorna Clay, manager of the Cannabis College in Amsterdam, a non-profit organization that distributes information about cannabis usage. But she said other coffee house owners have no

YOU WON'T FIND THAT IN THE U.S.

Lorna Clay, Cannabis College manager, said some of Amsterdam's 226 coffee shops have invested in new pipes and vaporizers to encourage pure cannabis use.

intention of stopping customers from smoking mixed joints. These owners argue that the city's renowned coffee shops are one of the main reasons why so many tourists visit. The new law comes on the heels of another change in what's thought to be a major Dutch tourist draw—legalized prostitution. The sex trade is regulated and is mostly confined to red-light districts. Officials began shutting the famous brothels that display lingerie-clad women in shopfront windows, and today there are 400 window brothels, down from 478 last year.

'Done deal'
6 Iran's parliament speaker on Wednesday warned that the West could face a "done deal" if it provokes Iran, in a rare hint by an Iranian official that Tehran could build nuclear weapons if attacked. Earlier this month, Israel sent warplanes on a major exercise in the Mediterranean that U.S. officials said was a message to Iran.

Violence kills 20
7 Police say 20 people have been killed in less than three days in Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, in the latest wave of violence in the border city. Police said more than 500 people have been killed there this year alone in drug-related violence. President Felipe Calderon has deployed 25,000 troops across the country to battle drug gangs.

Bodies wash up
8 Bodies in life jackets washed up on islands and drifted at sea Wednesday around San Fernando, Philippines, as more than 100 divers probed deeper inside a Philippine ferry that capsized during a powerful typhoon. Officials say they are still hopeful survivors can be found among more than 800 people missing since the seven-story ferry went down Saturday.

Militants arrested
9 Saudi authorities have arrested 701 suspected Al Qaeda-linked militants this year, including some who were plotting attacks against the kingdom's oil and economic installations, the Interior Ministry said Wednesday in Riyadh. Of those, 520 remain in custody while the others were released because there was no proof linking them to the terror network.

KNIGHT LIFE
Queen Elizabeth exercised her knight powers on Wednesday. KNIGHTED: In a break with normal procedure, Buckingham palace did not announce ahead of time that author Salman Rushdie would be honored Wednesday.

The palace said it's because he was a late addition, not a security concern. UNKNIGHTED: Zimbabwe's leader Robert Mugabe (left) was stripped of his honorary knighthood. The highly unusual move is meant to show Britain's revulsion with human rights abuses by his regime.

Crosstown mash-up

On Thursday night, a new Bulls rookie will take center stage in Chicago. But by Friday night, this town’s attention will turn back to its baseball teams, who play the sequel of their annual city series.

Last weekend, the Cubs made short work of their South Side rivals in a three-game sweep. But this time, the Sox will host their National League counterparts on their American League turf—U.S. Cellular Field. That means the Sox can use their most potent lineup, including designated hitter Jim Thome.

With that in mind, we pick the best of the best from the first-place clubs in RedEye’s All-City Team.

Geovany Soto, Cubs vs. A.J. Pierzynski, White Sox
It’s a bounce-back year for Pierzynski after injuries marred 2007, but he can’t keep up with the red-hot youngster. Soto (above) has given up 30 stolen bases and caught 12, while Pierzynski has given up 54 and caught 11. And Soto ranks third on the Cubs with 43 RBI before Wednesday’s game.

Derrek Lee, Cubs vs. Paul Konerko, White Sox

No contest here. Lee (above) headed into Wednesday’s game batting .294 and tied with Alfonso Soriano for the team lead in homers (15). Konerko has struggled with consistency and staying on the field.

Mark DeRosa, Cubs vs. Alexei Ramirez, White Sox
For someone the Cubs were trying to replace with Baltimore Oriole Brian Roberts, DeRosa (above) is quietly having a nice season, drawing the second most votes in NL All-Star fan voting. Ramirez has supplanted Juan Uribe and looks like an up-and-comer.

Aramis Ramirez, Cubs vs. Joe Crede, White Sox

No need to go into their offensive numbers—they’re both great RBI producers. But would you believe Ramirez (above) has half as many errors (7) as defensive stalwart Crede?

SHORTSTOP

Ryan Theriot, Cubs vs. Orlando Cabrera, White Sox

Cabrera has been great on the bases (11 steals, 46 runs), but Theriot (left) is having a career season. He went into Wednesday’s game batting .313 with 13 steals, and ranked third in All-Star fan voting.

Jim Thome, White Sox vs. Jim Edmonds, Cubs

Thome’s average is down, but his power still makes Thome (above) a threat (14 HRs).

Carlos Quentin, White Sox vs. Alfonso Soriano, Cubs
Both have had their hot streaks: Quentin (above) has had seven home runs and at least a .290 average in each of the first months, and has salvaged several Sox victories with timely hits. Soriano has done the same for the Cubs, particularly that six-game stretch in May when he had seven home runs, but he's on his second extended absence this season because of injury.

1. Ryan Dempster, Cubs; 2. Gavin Floyd, White Sox; 3. Carlos Zambrano, Cubs 4. Javier Vazquez, White Sox; 5. Ted Lilly, Cubs
How does this list not start with Mark Buehrle and Carlos Zambrano? Dempster (above) has a 9-2 record and 2.63 ERA while going undefeated at Wrigley Field, while Floyd has been steady at 8-3 and 3.19. He gets the edge despite similar numbers by Zambrano because the Sox's run support is not on par with the Cubs'. Vazquez was tied for fourth in all of baseball with 97 strikeouts as of Tuesday.

Nick Swisher, White Sox vs. Jim Edmonds, Cubs
New Sox slugger Swisher (above) almost wins by default. Despite Edmonds' hot bat of late, he'll have to look over his shoulder when Reed Johnson gets healthy.

Kosuke Fukudome, Cubs vs. Jermaine Dye, White Sox
Tough call. Both were batting a hair under .300 entering Wednesday. However, Fukudome's (above) ability to get on base from the fifth spot arguably has changed the complexion of the Cubs lineup.

1. Kerry Wood, Cubs 2. Bobby Jenks, White Sox 3. Carlos Marmol, Cubs 4. Scott Linebrink, White Sox 5. Octavio Dotel, White Sox
With all due respect to Jenks (16 saves, 19 strikeouts), switching the roles of Wood and Dempster has worked a minor miracle for the Cubs' pitching staff. As the closer, Wood (above) has racked up 23 saves with 46 strikeouts. Dotel has only six fewer punchouts (51) than Mark Buehrle in just 35 1/3 innings. Marmol has 64 in 45 innings. Linebrink had a sizzling 1.50 ERA through Tuesday.

CUBS 7, ORIOLES 4
Geovany Soto drove in three runs, Jim Edmonds (above) homered and the Cubs jumped on spot starter Matt Albers early and went on to beat the Baltimore Orioles 7-4 Wednesday night. Ted Lilly (8-5) went seven innings and gave up five hits and four runs, and Kerry Wood struck out the side in the ninth for his 20th save in 24 chances.

CUBS-SOX HITS
The White Sox game against the Dodgers in L.A. did not finish before press time. Visit chicagosports.com for full coverage.
>> Alfonso Soriano reiterated that he would like to return before the All-Star break so he can play in the Midsummer Classic at Yankee Stadium.

>> The Cubs changed the order of their rotation against the White Sox once again, switching Ryan Dempster from Saturday to Friday and moving Sean Gallagher from Friday to Saturday. Sean Marshall still will pitch the Sunday night game on ESPN. "This gives Dempster one more start [through the All-Star break], and that's basically it," Manager Lou Piniella said.
>> Jim Edmonds has gone from being released in May to a potential National League Player of the Month in June. The Cubs center fielder came into Wednesday's game hitting .346 (18-of-52) in June with five doubles, four homers, 16 RBI, a .407 on-base percentage and a .712 slugging percentage.
>> The Dodgers and White Sox are scheduled to share a new Spring Training camp next year in Glendale, Ariz., if it's completed on time.
>> The Sox are seeking nominees for its Roland Hemond Award. Fans can visit whitesox.com and submit names of people who have made sacrifices for others. The winner will be announced in September and receive a trip for two to the All-Star Game. [ TRIBUNE, AP, REDEYE ]

TOPIC 1: WHO IS CHICAGO'S TOP BASEBALL PLAYER AND WHY?

Paul Konerko would rather be disabled than play for the Sox. The same thing?	Mike Fontenot, for his community activism ... like his meetings with the Lollipop Guild.	As a Cubs fan I'm going to have to say Aramis Soriano! Is it time to sing yet?	Nick Swisher, for spreading a message of tolerance toward scary beards. ZZ Top thanks you.	No question, it's got to be Larry Biittner.
--	--	--	--	---

TOPIC 2: WHAT NEW FEATURE DO YOU EXPECT TO SEE IN THE 20TH ANNIVERSARY EDITION OF THE MADDEN GAME?

Joel Madden replaces John Madden as the Guy Who Is Extinct.	There's no actual game action, just all yellow Telestrator squiggles.	A catheter and liposuction vacuum attachment.	The new "Holdout Mode." We're talkin' 'bout PRACTICE, man!	During halftime, Cedric Benson and Pacman Jones play beer pong.

TOPIC 3: NOW THAT HE'S OUT AS A DEPUTY, WHAT SHOULD SHAQ DO WITH HIS SPARE TIME?

Clean out his trunk. That should free up his spare tire.	Mixed martial arts: Kimbo Slice ... meet Shaq Fu!	Definitely not rap. Ever.	Attend criminal lineups the old-fashioned way, by going to a Dallas Cowboys game.	Travel around the country and confiscate every DVD of "Kazaam."

TOPIC 4: CANDACE PARKER DUNKED AGAIN FOR A SECOND STRAIGHT GAME. WHAT DOES THIS MEAN FOR THE WNBA?

Did it really happen if no one saw it?	The league is thiiiiiiisssss close to being watchable.	Absolutely nothing. Wait, the what?	Pretty soon players will be flopping and traveling just like the guys do.	That their best player now had the skills of a junior high school boy.

TOPIC 5: A MODELING AGENCY TOOK PHOTOS OF SEVERAL LPGA GOLFERS IN BIKINIS AND LINGERIE. YOUR THOUGHTS?

Yuck. I'm heading to a bunker to get away from those water hazards.	Golfers in lingerie? I'd rather see gophers in lingerie. ... Not that I'm into that kind of thing.	Please not Laura Davies, please not Laura Davies, please not Laura Davies ...	Take that, Plumbers Illustrated swimsuit issue!	I like naked people.

Forward Michael Beasley, projected to be a scoring machine in the NBA, talks with the press Wednesday. [ AP PHOTO ]

Questions surround draft

On May 20, the day Derrick Rose signed with Arn Tellem and B.J. Armstrong in L.A., the agents asked their new client for whom he wanted to play.

"Of course I said the Bulls," Rose recalled, drawing laughter because of that scenario's long-shot nature.

Hours later, the Bulls shockingly overcame 1.7 percent odds to win the NBA lottery and the right to make Rose's dream come true Thursday.

When the Bulls make the first overall pick at about 6:35 p.m., it will end weeks of debate within the organization on whether to add the dynamic floor leader in Rose or the scoring machine that forward Michael Beasley projects to be.

Representatives for both players said GM John Paxson told them he would inform them of the organization's decision before the draft began Thursday, with a wide range of league observers convinced the pick will be Rose.

"It'd be a dream come true," the Simeon High product told reporters Wednesday in New York. What happens after the Bulls' pick is anybody's guess.

Talk throughout the league centered on the Heat's second pick. With Heat President Pat Riley seemingly intent on landing a point guard to pair with Dwyane Wade, trade speculation is rampant.

Memphis, Seattle, Minnesota and the Clippers are mentioned most prominently in talks for the No. 2 pick, although there were rumors the Bulls had inquired about trading for the pick as well.

Paxson all but ruled out trading the first pick in a media briefing Tuesday. He also preached patience.

"Every team would like to think when they have a bad year they can turn it around overnight," he said.

"But we have to look a few years down the road and figure out how we're going to be better."

AT THE BUZZER LPGA goes glamorous

When Dieter Esch began looking at the players on the LPGA Tour, he quickly figured out that something was missing. He sensed they always appeared out of place ... swinging nine-irons, hitting out of bunkers, putting cross-handed on the green.

So Esch decided it would be a great idea to put the golfers in something different, something the casual public does not see them in, at least up to now.

Like bikinis. Like lingerie. Like evening gowns.

How'd it turn out? Check out for yourself.

Perennial favorites?

New restaurants are sprouting up all over town this summer, with a Lincoln Park bistro leading the way

NOW OPEN ...

Perennial

1800 N. LINCOLN AVE. 312-981-7070
 Giuseppe Tentori, who was just named a 2008 Food & Wine Magazine Best New Chef for his work at Boka, does double-duty as the executive chef at this American bistro in Lincoln Park's new Park View Hotel. (Rob Katz and Kevin Boehm, the duo behind Boka, also are behind Perennial.) Look for seasonally inspired dishes such as rainbow trout with carrot puree, English peas, mint, bacon and sweet pea emulsion, and a prime 60-seat sidewalk patio outfitted with swank teak and steel tables and a curved pergola.

Ajasteak

660 N. STATE ST. 312-202-6000
 Steak or sushi? Well, why not both? At this splashy Asian steakhouse in River North's Dana Hotel, Kobe beef lovers (read: big spenders) can indulge in the ultra-premium Japanese steak (as well as its American cousin, Waygu), and sushi snobs get a selection of top-notch maki and sashimi.

Cipollina

1543 N. DAMEN AVE. 773-227-6300
 Carol Watson recently closed her Milk & Honey Bake Shop in Wicker Park, gave the space a quickie makeover, and opened Cipollina, a carryout-focused Italian deli and espresso bar. The pastry case now holds deli meats and cheeses, the shelves are stocked with Italian groceries, and the compact menu lists panini and gourmet sub sandwiches. Morning commuters heading to the nearby Damen "L" stop can snag grab-and-go breakfast fare, including Watson's popular house-made Milk & Honey granola. Milk & Honey devotees, don't fret: It's business as usual at the original cafe on Division Street.

COMING SOON ...

Hub 51

51 W. HUBBARD ST. 312-828-0051
 Who are Hub 51 owners R.J. and Jerrod Melman, and why should you care, you ask? Well, they're the sons of Richard Melman, founder of Lettuce Entertain You Enterprises, whose restaurant portfolio includes everything from high-end L20 to fast-food fave Wow Bao. Get a taste of what the next generation has in store when the younger Melmans' new American spot debuts Friday in River North. Look for a broad menu covering everything from seafood and sushi to tacos and burgers.

Steve's Deli

354 W. HUBBARD ST. 312-467-6868
 The original Steve's has been chopping chicken livers in Bloomfield Hills, Mich., since 1994, but Detroit natives won't have to make the trek back to get a pastrami fix after this kosher-style deli opens in River North in early July. Look for a full-service restaurant plus a grab-and-go/carryout component. Classics such as matzo ball soup, stuffed cabbage, gefilte fish and fried kreplach make the menu, as well as made-to-order salads and over-stuffed deli sandwiches. A retail area stocking gourmet groceries and wine is slated to open in late July.

Boston Blackie's

1962 N. HALSTED ST. NO PHONE YET
 The menu at this new Lincoln Park spot, scheduled to open in mid-July, will be similar to the menu at Blackie's other locations. The signature burgers get ample play; look for about 15 versions, including the Greek Boy, with feta cheese and onions, and the Fire Alarm, with melted cheddar, chili and giardiniera.

Wingstop

1637 N. MILWAUKEE AVE. NO PHONE YET
 This Texas-based made-to-order chicken wing chain is set to land in Bucktown in mid-July. Look for an aviation-themed interior (circa World War II) and a menu sporting nine sauces, from habanero-laced Atomic to sweet Teriyaki, plus sides such as fresh-cut fries and bourbon-baked beans.

The Counter

670 W. DIVERSEY PKWY. NO PHONE YET
 Yet another chain is rolling into Chicago later this summer, but it's not your run-of-the-mill fast food joint. California-based chain The Counter offers more than 312,000 possible burger combos. (Yes, 312,000!) You get to fully customize your burger, choosing from three sizes of beef, chicken, turkey and veggie patties, plus 10 cheeses, 26 toppings, 17 sauces and three types of buns—there's even a burger in a bowl, served on greens, sans bun.

Ice, ice baby

Wicker Park and Bucktown get a double dose of dairy this summer with the opening of two frozen dessert-focused spots. iCream

(1537 N. Milwaukee Ave.), which features made-to-order ice cream, fro-yo, sorbet and hot pudding, is slated to debut sometime in mid-July along the busiest stretch of Milwaukee Avenue in Wicker Park. Just a few blocks north on Damen Avenue, a Dairy Queen/Orange Julius (1649 N. Damen Ave.) is scheduled for an early July bow. Look for a lineup of classic DQ faves such as Blizzards and Peanut Buster Parfaits, plus those signature smoothie-like concoctions from Orange Julius. [ T.M. ]

Here's your 'cue

By Emily Hiser Lobdell

Their eats: What possibly could be better than kicking back on your patio with a beer and some barbecue this summer? Try chilling out on someone else's patio with a beer while they do the cooking. While the bright yellow interior and blaring TV at Calvin's BBQ don't make for the most relaxing atmosphere indoors, the Logan Square barbecue joint's pleasant outdoor space is a calming oasis, enclosed by a fence and decorated with potted flowers. Sit back, sip your beer and let the hickory-smoked barbecue come to you. We like the pulled pork sandwich ($6.50; $7.25 if you want it smothered in cheese) with a side of baked beans ($2.50). You'll also find burgers, ribs, catfish and salads on the menu.

Your drinks: Though it looks like a typical corner liquor store from the outside, nearby Vas Foremost Liquors (2300 N. Milwaukee Ave. 773-278-9420) stocks a pretty impressive beer selection. Swing by for a six-pack of summery beer such a Whirlwind Witbier ($10.69), a Belgian-style white ale from Victory Brewing Co. in Pennsylvania, or Mojo India Pale Ale ($9.99), a surprisingly light and smooth IPA from Colorado's Boulder Beer Company. If you'd prefer something sweeter to match Calvin's sweet and tangy 'cue, consider a bottle of Aspall Draught Cyder from Suffolk, England ($6.99). Calvin's does not charge a corkage fee.

Orchestrating a different sound

Butterfly Assassins bring classical influence into rock

By Kent Green
FOR REDEYE

Butterfly Assassins traded the orchestra pit for the mosh pit. The band's songs feature Bach-ian crescendos built by guitar and cello, punctuated by staccato blasts of piano and drums. It begs to accompany a dramatic movie scene. The sound evokes other bands with orchestral arrangements, such as the Arcade Fire.

"We saw them and said, 'There are other people doing this and it is possible, and we can make it work,'" Butterfly Assassins' guitarist Bryan Kveton said. Kveton, drummer Dylan Fischer, pianist and lead vocalist Brian Trahan, and bassist Danny Yadron grew up in Grayslake, taking orchestra or band classes in school and playing together for fun. They coalesced as a band in 2002, and cellist Kate Wakefield joined about a year ago.

The quintet released its first LP, "Sylvia," in April. While the classical influence remained intact, it was less obvious than on the band's 2006 self-released EP, which featured songs such as "Prelude No. 1 in D Minor." Yadron said the band's epic style was not a conscious choice and more an extension of the members' backgrounds.

CHITUNES

Listen to the Butterfly Assassins' "Exit Here" from "Sylvia" on redeyechicago.com/chitunes.

"Even as late as 2006, we were writing extremely typical four-chord pop songs," Yadron said. "We were still trying to figure it out."

All the members are in college, so breaks are the easiest time to play live and write songs. This summer could be a big one; the band recently won a few competitions, filmed its first music video and scheduled several shows.

"We'd like to be as big as we can be," Kveton said. "I think we're noticing more attention slowly, and hopefully that's going to a good place."

Girl Talk
"FEED THE ANIMALS"

!!! "Feed the Animals" is a typically colorful, animated collection of seamlessly layered samples, with few pretensions to high art: This is a party album through and through, a place where classic rock riffs (Spencer Davis Group, the Guess Who) groove underneath contemporary rap hits and '80s pop cheese. It's a gimmick, yep, but it's also a dependably impressive feat of editing, beat-matching and musical intuition. Girl Talk is offering the album in a suggest-your-price download—which includes, if you insist, $0.00. illegallart.net.

JOLIE GETS TRIGGER-HAPPY AS AN ASSASSIN OUT FOR JUSTICE IN 'WANTED'

By Michael Mellini
REDEYE

Fast cars, curving bullets, trains falling off cliffs. The new action thriller "Wanted" has plenty of jaw-dropping visual effects, but as is the case with most of the movies in which she acts, all eyes are on the film's star, Angelina Jolie.

In the movie, opening Friday, Jolie returns to the shoot 'em up genre that usually yields her biggest hits. She plays the aptly named Fox, a member of the super-secret assassin group the Fraternity, which hunts down future evil-doers.

"Kill one, save a million" is Fox's motto.

"Wanted" spoke to Jolie's belief that "without justice there is no peace," she recently told Entertainment Weekly. Criminals, Jolie said, should be held accountable for their acts.

"The idea behind 'Wanted' is not that she's a badass assassin that just likes to kill people," Jolie told the magazine, "it's that, if you ran into Hitler before he did everything [that he did] and you knew, should you shoot him? And I would."

Strong statements like that are the reason Jolie captivates the press and fans.

At last month's Cannes Film Festival, Jolie, pregnant with twins, stole attention from the competing films as she and boyfriend Brad Pitt made the red carpet rounds. Her work as a Goodwill Ambassador for the UN, her adoption (along with Pitt) of three children, the birth of their daughter, Shiloh, and, of course, her movie roles keep Jolie in the spotlight without her having to try.

Despite all that, her "Wanted" co-stars say you'd never know she's such a global attraction. "She's chilled out, a nice woman," James McAvoy told Newsday.

German actor Thomas Kretschmann agreed, adding: "You come on set, you've seen her all over the place, but it takes about 30 seconds to get over any intimidation. She makes it that way. She's easygoing, but she's a strong woman."

NAUGHTY BY NATURE

Angelina Jolie's character in the new film "Wanted," Fox, is an insanely gorgeous, badass assassin, a good fit for the insanely gorgeous, badass actress. Take a look. [M.M.]

Grendel's Mother

"BEOWULF" (2007)

Profession: Demon

Weapons: Seductive voice and smokin' bod. (She looks incredible—minus the creepy tail—when animated.)

Deadly dialogue: "Love me and I shall weave you riches beyond imagination. I shall make you the greatest king that ever lived."

Art imitates life: We're betting that, just like Grendel's mother, Angelina will go to great lengths to protect her (ever-growing army of) children.

Badass factor: After wreaking havoc on the kingdom where her son was murdered, Jolie seduces his killer (the warrior Beowulf) by granting him power and wealth. She then haunts the poor guy for the rest of his life.

JOLIE PLAYS AN ASSASSIN NAMED FOX IN 'WANTED.'

Jane Smith
"MR. & MRS. SMITH" (2005)
Profession: Assassin posing as a white-collar office worker assigned to eliminate her husband (Brad Pitt), who turns out to be a fellow gun for hire.
Weapons: Machine gun, sniper rifle, throwing knives, any available household item—oh, and playful banter with Pitt.
Deadly dialogue: After shooting at her husband, Jane says, "Still alive, baby?"
Art imitates life: While they haven't tried to kill each other yet, the couple's on-screen chemistry proved to be real, and Pitt fled Casa Jennifer Aniston for Team Angelina.
Badass factor: As the head of an all-female assassin squad, she uses her purse as a zip-line to drop from a skyscraper. As a wife, she's one helluva (fake) cook and sultry tango dancer.

'WANTED' SHOOTING LOCATIONS

Chicagoans may recognize several locations in "Wanted," including the car chase scene looking west toward the "L" tracks at Lake Street and Wabash Avenue in the photos below. According to Chicago Film Office director Rick Moskal, nearly all the Chicago-shot scenes were for that car chase sequence. Here's a list of other places where the "Wanted" crew filmed. [ REDEYE ]

- >> Wacker Drive from Columbus Drive to State Street
- >> Lower Wacker Drive from Harrison Street to Michigan Avenue
- >> Wabash Avenue from Wacker Drive to Randolph Street
- >> At the intersection of Clark Street and Newport Avenue

ANGIE'S CHICAGO

Angelina Jolie spent a busy two weeks in Chicago last August with Brad Pitt and their children when she filmed scenes for "Wanted." Here's a rundown of the places Jolie was spotted, according to RedEye's Eye Contact columnist Liz Crokin.

- >> Jolie and her family stayed at the Peninsula Chicago. She worked out in the gym and dined with Pitt at the hotel's Avenues restaurant.
- >> Jolie and Pitt took their kids to watch the annual Air & Water show from a boat.
- >> Jolie took son Maddox shopping for books at the Michigan Avenue Borders and took daughter Zahara to Timeless Toys in Lincoln Square.
- >> Jolie and Pitt took all the kids to the Field Museum, which closed for a private tour.
- >> Jolie, Pitt and others from "Wanted" dined at Japonais in River North.

Captain Franky Cook

"SKY CAPTAIN AND THE WORLD OF TOMORROW" (2004)
Profession: Fighter pilot, helping Jude Law battle giant robot baddies.
Weapon: Her amphibious plane does some major damage both in the air and underwater.
Deadly dialogue: "It's a pleasure to finally meet the competition."
Art imitates life: Well, the eye patch is strikingly different, and Angie always has been a fan of the jarring accessories (tattoos, vial of Billy Bob Thornton's blood).
Badass factor: Her part is brief, and Gwyneth Paltrow's character got the guy, but without Franky, Law never would have saved the day.

Lara Croft

"LARA CROFT: TOMB RAIDER" (2001); "LARA CROFT: TOMB RAIDER: THE CRADLE OF LIFE" (2003)
Profession: Well-bred English archaeologist and adventurer
Weapons: Shotguns, her own fists, you name it—but mainly a pair of semi-automatic pistols.
Deadly dialogue: "What's pleasure without pain?"
Art imitates life: Croft travels the globe seeking thrills and collecting antiquities. Jolie does the same but also brings back children with her.
Badass factor: Croft sky-dives into jungles and excels at fighting upside-down.

Sara 'Sway' Wayland

"GONE IN 60 SECONDS" (2000)
Profession: Mechanic/bartender/car thief
Weapons: As a mechanic, wrench. As a bartender, shot glass. As a car thief, jumper cables.
Deadly dialogue: "What do you think is more exciting: having sex or stealing cars?"

Art imitates life: Jolie's humanitarian side probably wouldn't approve of all the burglaries, but the speed racing helps Angie the pilot.
Badass factor: She excels at driving fast cars—and is even better at stealing them.

Lisa Rowe

"GIRL, INTERRUPTED" (1999)
Profession: Mental hospital patient
Weapon: The pen she threatens to jam in her "aorta."
Deadly dialogue: "You don't know what freedom is! I'm free. I can breathe. And you ... will choke on your average [bleeping] mediocre life!"
Art imitates life: Even after winning an Oscar for the role, Jolie was a hell-raiser whose every move was watched by the world.
Badass factor: Lisa always fights with the nurses, looks for new ways to escape or to uncover medical records. She's a bad influence on other patients.

Eyeing the guys

Makeup companies push men's style boundaries

The Hartford Courant

Concealer, bronzer, self-tanner, eyeliner—it sounds like a checklist of items in a woman's makeup bag.

But they could be items in a man's makeup bag.

The last decade saw the "metrosexual" phenomenon, with men paying more attention to shopping, dressing and grooming. Now, established companies known for makeup and skin-care products for women are catering to the other gender with products to push men's style boundaries.

Patty Bunch, a celebrity makeup artist who has worked on actors Halle Berry, Billy Crystal, Tony Danza and Jennifer Aniston, says she knows men who dye their lashes or wear waterproof mascara to give new dimension to their lashes.

"Men are finding that they can use skin-care products that protect and enhance their skin. They can take away shine and cover unwanted imperfections that keeps skin looking natural, masculine and not 'done up,'" Bunch says.

She believes it takes only a few people to start a trend and cosmetics companies have begun trying it out at the right time. Men can sample makeup by using under-eye products, such as anti-aging serums and concealers, for important business meetings and social events.

Some people are embarrassed by the direction cosmetics has taken.

Guyliners and more

>> Fall Out Boy Pete Wentz, husband of singer Ashlee Simpson-Wentz, has a line of guyliners called "WentzPentz."

>> Clinique has non-streak bronzer and concealer for men.

>> Jean Paul Gaultier has a two-in-one stick of concealer and eyeliner.

Tyler Thoreson, executive editor of men.style.com, the online home of Details and GQ magazines, says he's noticed "man makeup" but doesn't believe it'll ever become popular. In fact, he laughs at the suggestion.

"I think it's completely idiotic. It gives true men's fashion and men's style a bad name," Thoreson says. "All of that should accentuate your masculinity, not undermine it."

He acknowledges a demand for more grooming options for men—almost $5 billion was spent in 2006 on male grooming products, a 42 percent increase from 2001, says Euromonitor, a London marketing and research firm.

But Thoreson says there probably are very few guys who would wear concealer or bronzer and stick with it.

"If one of my friends showed up to my house wearing a Thom Browne suit, I'd say, 'Cool, pushing some boundaries,'" Thoreson says. "But if he showed up wearing some bronzer, I'd say, 'Hey, you got something on your face.'"

The Clari-Fi sound-refinement device is like a buffered aspirin for your digital music player. It soothes the harsh, strident sound of highly compressed mp3 files so they don't give you a headache.

The product from Intunition of San Jose, Calif., targets a large audience of iPod owners subsisting on 99 cent iTunes downloads. These files, at 128 kilobits per second, throw out about 90 percent of a song's data from the original CD. The brittle highs might prove fatiguing to some ears—or even induce a headache after longer listening sessions.

The Clari-Fi, a thimble-size brick with an umbilical cord that's inserted between an iPod and earbuds, actually compresses the mp3 signal further. It filters the digital artifacts in those high frequencies, making it much easier on your ears. And that goes for you, too, metalheads.

Though the Clari-Fi works, where's the outcry over the quality of 99 cent downloads? Apple, amazon.com and others offer slightly higher-quality enhanced files at 256 kilobits per second, but all the low-fi downloads are extremely forgiving when played through earbuds. Play these same music files over a modest sound system, though, and you'll quickly hear the difference between them and a CD, which has more than five times the resolution of

CLARI-FI

Price: $50 at intunition.com (Also available in podcast version, which reduces the dynamic range—the difference between lowest- and highest-volume sounds—for more comfortable listening.)

Why it's cool: Tames edgy mp3 sound

Why it's not cool: Requires adjustment period by listener. Also reduces volume by 20 percent.

even the enhanced files.

The Clari-Fi's effects likely won't make a good first impression, either. The highs get a major makeover, toned down so much that it's no wonder music becomes less fatiguing. But give it time. (Intunition offers a 30-day, risk-free trial.) Absent those nagging highs, the music initially loses some immediacy but becomes better balanced.

Most people prefer these smaller files, of course, because they can fit so many more songs onto their iPod. Even lossless files, compressed files that do not discard data from the CD original, still consume up to four times the disk space of a lowly mp3.

If you're stuck with a library of low-quality downloads and your head's banging, the Clari-Fi might put your mind at ease.

Keep Spot cool this summer

Newsday

Summertime can take a toll on dogs and cats. Here are some simple tips and innovative products that can help your critters stay cool.

>> Autopilot. Everyone knows—or at least they should know—that parked cars can become death traps in a matter of minutes, even on a mild summer day. But sometimes less obvious places, such as outdoor kennels, might get too hot to handle. For peace of mind, invest in a remote wireless thermometer that lets you monitor temperatures from afar. Radio Shack (radioshack.com) offers some models that start at $30.

>> Pass the lotion. Hairless dogs such as Chinese cresteds need ample doses of sunscreen to avoid crisping. (Use a dog-specific brand to avoid toxicity from licking the stuff off.) White cats, or those with white on their ears or faces, also are at risk of sunburn, as well as squamous cell carcinoma, a cancer that often appears on the nose and ear tips.

>> Weather or not: Exercising dogs on extremely hot days is a definite no-no. (If you must, go out in early morning or late evening.) But if you own an animal that is brachycephalic—a 50-cent word meaning “flat-faced”—be exceedingly careful: Bulldogs, pugs, Persian cats—all are more prone to sunstroke than their more normally nosed counterparts. Keep them cool at all costs.

>> Hair today: Breeds that hail from northern climes, such as malamutes and huskies, also appreciate air conditioning. Do not make the mistake of “shaving down” such dogs in an attempt to keep them cool. Not only does it make them look totally bizarre, but their coats actually provide some insulation from the heat. Do keep long-coated dogs and cats well groomed and free from mats, so air can circulate around them more effectively.

>> Paws and reflect. For animals who spend time outdoors, reflective fabric can deflect sun and heat. Durable, lightweight and rot resistant, shiny, futuristic-looking silver mesh is available in sizes that fit over exercise pens, kennels, even the dogs themselves. Check out silvershademesh.com.

>> Water, water everywhere. Make sure the wet stuff is readily available. Cats in particular appreciate running water. Gizmos such as the Drinkwell Pet Foundation (petco.com) consistently get thumbs-up from owners.

>> It's a breeze. Battery-operated crate fans that clip onto the front of your dog's crate can help with air circulation. Some models allow you to add a freezer-pack insert to up the cool-down factor. Go to eliteK9.com/kennel\_supplies/index1.htm.

>> Be aware. Watch for signs of heat exhaustion or heat stroke, which include uncontrollable panting, staggering, salivating, weakness and confusion. Get to the vet as quickly as possible.

5 REASONS TO GO

Today's Twin Cities represent some of the best of what American urban centers provide visitors: a vibrant downtown (certainly in Minneapolis), good lodging at most price-points, legendary shopping, plenty of live music and theater, museums, spectator sports, a dose of history, a variety of restaurants and a transport system that makes access reasonably easy. No wonder it's one of the region's finest options for a fun weekend.

POP TRAVEL

A good seat is hard to find

Search before you sit when booking air travel, or you may be stuck in an economy-class seat where half the leg room is taken up by an immovable metal box. Seatguru.com may be able to help:

What's hot: Choose an airline, and you'll get an alphabetical menu of the planes the airline flies. Each model shows a diagram of its interior. You'll learn the seat pitch and width, and you'll be able to instantly see which seats are the best based on a color code. Good seats are green; yellow seats have some issues, such as being too close to the bathrooms; red, you're in trouble. Roll your mouse over the seat, and you'll get a mini review and more information, such as whether it has a power outlet. SeatGuru also includes information about food service, pet policies and facilities for infants. It also has baggage rules.

What's not: Some foreign airlines that fly from the U.S.—China Airlines and Jet Airways, for example—are not listed, and some that have gone out of business this year—Aloha Airlines—still are listed.

Avoid out-of-country blunders

Chicago Tribune

Americans aren't always greeted with open arms when traveling abroad. That could be because open arms aren't polite in that particular country, or it could be that we're perceived as louts and the people there don't want to hug us. It's your mission to find out.

The travel Web site vayama.com surveyed U.S. travelers, about half of whom said they have committed social sins in other countries, and about the same number said they simply force their American customs on others, not bothering to find out if you're supposed to let the oldest guy in the room start eating first (Kenya). To help you prepare, we've culled some tips from the site's etiquette section, vayama.com/etiquette:

>> Don't be offended by Argentine humor, which can sometimes be insulting, such as poking fun at your appearance, weight or attire. It's all in good fun.

>> Don't kiss the hand of an Austrian woman unless you are Austrian.

>> In Brazil, don't make the "OK" sign with your hand. It's considered a very rude gesture.

>> Don't give a Chinese person a clock as a gift. Clocks are associated with death and funerals, and a clock as a gift can be seen as a sinister action.

>> In Denmark, don't be too touchy-feely. It's not appreciated.

>> Just the opposite in Italy. Don't pull away or get offended if an Italian associate wishes to hug you. Embrace him or her in return!

>> In Egypt, don't use your left hand to eat.

>> In Ghana, don't blow your nose at the dinner table. (Could we adopt that here, please?)

>> In India, do leave a small amount of food on your plate to show you are satisfied. Eating everything off your plate means you're still hungry.

>> But in Kenya, finish everything on your plate. It's not necessary, but it's a polite thing to do.

And if all that is too much to remember, might we suggest Moline this year?

For those about to rock ... Wii salutes you

Rock Band for the Wii really struts its stuff when two or more people play, letting gamers feel what it's like to be in a virtual band.

Rock Band
MTV GAMES/WII/$169.99

Wii owners have been clamoring for their version of Rock Band ever since the title debuted on the Xbox 360 and PS3 in November. Sure, the Wii edition lacks some of the online features found on those other consoles, but developer Harmonix made sure it got the game play right with this port. The Rock Band package includes a drum kit and microphone, which plug into an included USB hub, and a wireless Fender Stratocaster guitar controller that transmits to a USB dongle. Add in an additional guitar controller as a bass ($59.99) and you've got a four-piece band. The big draw here is the drum set. You get to use a real pair of sticks to pound on four colored touch pads while interspersing some pedal stomps on the kick drum. Singing works just like a Karaoke Revolution game, with lyrics horizontally scrolling on a staff at the top of the screen. Keep the flying triangle on each scrolling tube by singing on key and you'll be rewarded with points. Rock Band really shows its stuff with two or more players, as no other game comes close to letting gamers experience the camaraderie of playing in a band.

Guitar Hero: On Tour
ACTIVISION/$49.99/DS

Taking a game built around a full-sized guitar peripheral and adapting it for a hand-held is no easy task, but Guitar Hero: On Tour aces this solo. Substituting for the ax is a glovelike guitar grip that plugs into the DS's GamePak slot. It features four colored buttons instead of the standard Guitar Hero five and includes a nifty guitar pick stylus so players can strum the touch screen while notes scroll down the secondary screen. Earphones are a must, as the DS's internal speakers don't provide enough volume to truly rock out.

Guitar Hero: On Tour puts the game at your fingertips.

The game offers co-op and face-off modes, but duels provide the most fun with creative battle attacks that take advantage of the DS touch screen. Hit your opponents with pyrotechnics to force them to blow into the internal mic and put out the flames. And instead of just repeatedly hitting a button to fix a broken string as in the console titles, players must use the stylus to attach the end of the string and drag it up the neck to get that note back up and running. Very clever. Guitar Hero: On Tour has got to be one of the best titles to hit the DS this year.

What YouTube told Weezer about you

Three days after Weezer posted its music video “Pork & Beans” on YouTube last month, 2.2 million people had watched it. And 65 percent of them were men.

The heavily male demographic surprised the band’s marketing team, which three months ago wouldn’t have been able to find out about the gender, or much else, of the people clicking on one of Weezer’s videos. A feature called YouTube Insight, introduced in March, gives YouTube account holders who have uploaded videos to the site a range of statistics, charts and maps about their audiences.

The data bring a little science to what has been the art of viral marketing and the potential for big changes in how bands, TV shows, movies and consumer products are promoted on the Internet.

Until recently, “it’s been hard to measure the success of online advertising campaigns,” said Adam Spielberger, executive vice president of interactive marketing at Special Ops Media, a New York interactive advertising agency. Now “people are trying to dig down into the numbers.”

YouTube Insight gives bands like Weezer (above) all kinds of data about who is watching their videos.

Insight is part of a trend on the Web. Facebook offers account holders a weekly report that, like Insight, is free. The information it provides is used by individuals and companies that have Facebook pages and want to hone their marketing.

Before Insight, YouTube success was measured primarily by the number of a video’s “views.” The Insight data include age, gender and geographic location as well as the Internet sites that viewers came from and where they went after watching a clip.

Marketers and advertisers use the data to decide how to target future ads or where bands should tour, said Tracy Chan, Insight product manager.

“YouTube is becoming the world’s biggest focus group,” Chan said.

The YouTube data are more specific than what bands typically can get from TV and radio, said Ben Patterson, who worked on Weezer’s digital marketing strategy.

“What’s distinct about YouTube Insight is the immediacy of the information and the discovery element—how viewers found the content,” he said.

With Insight, Weezer learned that people who watched “Pork & Beans” after its release May 23 were predominantly younger than 18 and between 35 and 45. At first, most found the video through YouTube or Google, but many linked to it via technology news blogs such as Valleywag. After three days, 38 percent of viewers had discovered “Pork & Beans” not on YouTube but on other sites where people had posted it.

Weezer’s experience on YouTube will affect marketing decisions this summer as the band prepares to go on tour.

Patterson said Weezer wanted to figure out how to target the people who watched the video and how to reach out to those who didn’t. The Insight info, he said, raised questions. Should Weezer curtail advertising in traditional spots? Would money be better spent advertising on technology sites such as Gizmodo?

Ideally, the data provided by YouTube Insight will “help identify better who true tastemakers are,” said Patterson, president of DashGo, a Santa Monica, Calif., company that provides digital distribution and marketing to independent artists.

“What really sparks a viral campaign? What is the match to the flame?”

“The Insight data include age, gender and geographic location as well as the Internet sites that viewers came from and where they went after watching a clip. Marketers and advertisers use the data to decide how to target future ads or where bands should tour.”

From funny to 'Fear'

James Roday and Maggie Lawson are trading in the comedy of "Psych" for something spookier.

On the latest episode of NBC's "Fear Itself," called "In Sickness and Health," the "Psych" co-stars play a couple whose wedding day doesn't go quite as planned. Just before they walk the aisle, Samantha (Lawson) gets a note saying that Carlos (Roday) is a serial killer.

"I'm sort of doing like a poor man's Jack Nicholson from 'The Shining,'" Roday said Thursday during a conference call with reporters.

The actor, best known lately for playing fake psychic/practical joker Shawn Spencer opposite Lawson's cop Juliet O'Hara on the USA Network show, said "Fear Itself" was "a fun little gag" because John Landis directed it. The "An American Werewolf in London" director has worked on "Psych" in the past, Roday said.

Airing at 9 p.m. Thursday on NBC, the "Fear Itself" episode follows what happens to Samantha and Carlos on their wedding day—including a bit of psychological terror.

Pride Parade not just about partying, floats

I recently overheard two straight guys talking about Sunday's Gay Pride Parade. I'll call them Chad No. 1 and Chad No. 2, just cause that name seems to be a good fit for both.

Chad No. 1 said his girlfriend wanted to go to the parade, which he didn't seem to mind. Chad No. 2 replied, "Why do they need a Gay Pride Parade? We don't have a Straight Pride Parade."

I was tempted to go into a long diatribe about the importance of the parade—and Gay Pride Month, which is this month—but then they exited the train.

I can understand to a certain degree why someone outside the gay community, like Chad No. 2, might question the need for a gay pride event.

What I don't understand is when I hear young gay men complain about Pride. Over the weekend, I heard gay guys who I'm guessing were in their early 20s, saying how Pride is "stupid" and "boring."

I figured it was because they may not know the history and struggles that many gays and lesbians had to go through to pave the way for the rest of us.

It is much easier to be out and proud in 2008 than it was 10 or 15 years ago.

And it is much easier to be out in a large city like Chicago than in other places. Even still, gays can encounter hatred and homophobia at any turn, which is why Pride events help to educate the masses.

I realized some of you might wonder the same thing: Why do we need a Gay Pride Parade?

In general, the Gay Pride Parade (part of Gay Pride Month) exists because for many, many years, homosexuals were, and in many cases still are, ostracized, belittled and oppressed. The Pride Parade is a way for the community to be out and proud and show the world that we are a force in society.

For me, the parade means that and more.

Growing up in Pittsburgh, the gay community was, and still is in some respect, underground. There were no parades or public support groups for homosexuals.

When I moved to Chicago in 1997 and experienced my first Pride Parade (Chicago's being the largest in the Midwest), I was blown away by the sense of inclusion. Gay, straight and transgender people came out to show their support. I was welcomed, and for the first time, I felt like I wasn't alone.

There's no Straight Pride Parade because straight men, especially straight white men like the Chads, have never been oppressed in society. They've never faced laws forbidding them to marry. And they don't live in a society that sometimes makes them feel ashamed and hated for being who they are—so much so that some gays consider suicide as an alternative to coming out publicly.

It sounds like a pretty heavy subject because it is.

Pride celebrations aren't just for the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender communities. Many of my straight friends are looking forward to the Pride events, parties and parade this year.

In fact, when Tiffany, who's performing at Pride Fest on Saturday, sings "I think we're alone now," I can look around at the hundreds of friends of the family and think "we aren't as alone as we used to be." [SEX COLUMNIST JASON STEELE IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.]

"We are also working on a spinoff series," Gervais wrote, "but I can't tell you anything about that yet."

Now with extra beef

The viral feud between Ice-T and Soulja Boy Tell'em continues, people.

"I ain't sugar-coat nothing," the rapper said of his back-and-forth with Ice after the elder statesman of rap dissed him via an Internet video.

"I ain't scared of dude or nothing like that," he told MTV News at the BET Awards on Tuesday. "I just told him how I felt when he spoke on me. This ain't no beef or drama. I'm 17 years old and he's I-don't-know-how-old. I was defending myself."

The beef started with Ice blaming Soulja for "single-handedly killing" hip-hop. After Soulja fired back, Ice apologized, but he maintained that the younger rapper's music and lyrics were "garbage."

West fights back against critics

Kanye West is angry that people are criticizing his controversial two-hour-late arrival on the Bonnaroo stage earlier this month. He posted a blog at kanyeversecity.com in his defense.

"I am sick of negative people who just sit around trying 2 plot my downfall ... This Bonnaroo thing is the worst insult I've ever had in my life. This is the most offended I've ever been ... this is the maddest I ever will be."

"Call me any name you want," he continued, "arrogant, conceited, narcissistic, racist ... but never say I didn't give my all."

Bonnaroo organizers at the time said Kanye's set started late because Pearl Jam's ran an hour long and it took time to load Kanye's stage after that. Festival-goers threw garbage on the stage.

Photographers: John Mayer has a job, OK?

He's a paparazzi target, a blogger and an A-list playboy.

So what ever happened to John Mayer being a guitarist? Mayer told USA Today he doesn't mind not having complete privacy, so long as the intrusion meshes with "the message that I'm a musician."

"If you're going to take pictures of me doing mundane stuff, will you at least take pictures of me playing guitar? Because right now it looks like all I do is drink coffee and do dry cleaning and go eat dinner."

Obama-rama

Maybe Barack Obama is just not that into you, Scarlett Johansson.

The Illinois senator downplayed a report that he e-mails back and forth with the Hollywood starlet, as she suggested recently to politico.com. He said she doesn't have his personal e-mail address.

"She sent one e-mail to Reggie [Love, Obama's personal assistant], who forwarded it to me," Obama told reporters, according to Washington Post blog The Trail. "I write saying, 'Thank you, Scarlett for doing what you do,' and suddenly we have this e-mail relationship."

Elsewhere in celeb land, Will Smith said he'd be willing to sign on to an Obama biopic, according to mtv.com. Smith suggested his large ears would fit the character of the presidential hopeful.

"That's the key," Smith said. "America loves ears, you know? Mickey Mouse started it; Goofy and Dumbo followed behind."
